The 10th East Asia International Symposium on Teacher Education will be held at Nagoya International Center, Nagoya, on October 31st (Saturday) and November 1st (Sunday), 2015.

This symposium is hosted by the International Consortium for Universities of Education in East Asia (ICUE). ICUE is made up of 44 institutions which are mainly single-department universities of education and universities consisting of teacher training departments from Japan, China, and Korea.

Since the 1st East Asia International Symposium was held in 2006 by the effort of Tokyo Gakugei University, it became a yearly rotation system operated by the main universities of education in Japan, China and Korea. This symposium has served as a forum to elaborate the measures for the development of teacher education in the traditional cultural context of East Asia.

Up until now Japan has successfully hosted the first, the fourth and the seventh symposiums. It is a great honor for Aichi University of Education to host this memorable 10th symposium.

The theme of this year's symposium is "Development of Teacher Education in the Global Era ". Through the discussions on the functions of professional graduate schools, the existing graduate schools for teacher education and the future of doctoral programs including Ed.D. program, we would like to have sufficient exchanges of views on how to improve development of teacher education.

Therefore, we are pleased to announce the information of this symposium to your academic staff and graduate students.
